

Sociology & Anthropology Advising Information

Spring 2012

We have a small but dedicated crew of teacher-scholars offering several interesting electives for the spring semester.

In Anthropology, we are pleased by the return of Dr. Hillary Delprete, who will be teaching 2 sections of ANT111, Intro to Physical Anthropology, as well as ANT240, Intro to Epidemiology and ANT370 Topics: Hunters & Gatherers. Dr. Adler will teach a section of ANT110, Intro to Cultural Anthropology, along with a section of ANT 315, Ethnicity, Race, & Nation. And we are pleased that Professor Ratcliffe will be with us again teaching two sections of ANT110 as well.

In Sociology, we are pleased to have our colleague Dr. Brown-Glaude of African-American Studies teaching SOC303, Women in World Perspective, Dr. Swiatek will share his expertise in SOC320, Community, City, and Suburb, and Professor Scarpati will teach SOC365, Poverty and Welfare in the U.S. To these electives add Dr. Bates' teaching of SOC302, Quantitative Research Methods, Dr. Brodsky's teaching of SOC301, SocioCultural Theory, Dr. Clydesdale's teaching of SOC499, Senior Seminar, two invitation-only research courses by Dr. Bates and Dr. Li, and a slew of outstanding faculty teaching 8 sections of Intro to Sociology (including Drs Li & Ismail, and Professors Cohen, Camiolo, and Seaton).

Our department is pleased to be hiring 1.5 new full-time faculty members as well as a departmental program assistant (to replace Mrs. Cape, who retired in August); however, please be patient as we make this transition. Our temporary secretary, Gabrielle Sabatino will be happy to assist you as best she can, and you may also draw upon the assistance of your advisors & chair.

Thank you, and best wishes for a smooth registration process.
