

Registration Guide for Fall 2013 Courses

Registration for Fall courses starts this year on Tuesday, April 2 through Friday, April 12. The Department of Sociology and Anthropology looks forward to working with you as you plan your schedule. This document should help you to do so, but it is not a substitute for an advising appointment, so please arrange to meet with your major advisor before registration.

Next semester, we have an array of electives to choose from including Special Topics courses detailed on page 4. If you have not yet taken a course with the newest sociologist in the department, now's your chance! Dr. Lynn Gazley, who joined us from Northwestern University this past fall, is a medical sociologist whose research examines the intersection of the fields of medical sociology, the sociology of science and inequality. Next fall, she will offer two sections of SOC 373, Public Health and Social Policy.

Other exciting offerings include SOC 365, Poverty and Welfare in the U.S., taught by the Assistant Dean of Nursing, Antonino Scarpati; SOC205, Introduction to Social Work, taught by Tom Swiatek; and ANT335, Global Urbanization, taught by Dr. Rachel Adler. Those interested in material culture might want to take either section of ANT111, Introduction to Physical Anthropology, taught by Dr. Hillary Del Prete. Please remember that SOC majors can count ANT courses towards the major, so be sure to check for both prefixes on PAWS when you register.

Advising

Individual Advising

Students are strongly encouraged to meet with their faculty advisor before registering for classes. Drop by your advisor's office to sign up for an advising appointment time. Sign-up sheets will be posted starting the week of March 18th outside your advisor's office. Please be on time for your appointment and review the HSS "Advising Syllabus" you received over email. If you are unsure who your advisor is, open your student account in PAWS and check the right-hand column under ADVISOR.

Group Advising

A group advising session with Department Chair Dr. Borland and Program Assistant Karen Dubrulle will be held on March 21 in Social Sciences 340 from 11:30-12:30. We will review general information to help you plan your courses wisely; this meeting complements your individual advising appointment with your faculty advisor, and is especially recommended for students newer to TCNJ.

Peer Mentor Nicole Matyas is the Peer Mentor for Sociology and Anthropology. She has office hours every Thursday from 12pm-2pm in the Social Science Building Atrium. Nicole is a great resource for peer advising and can offer tips on course selection, study strategies, and even applying to graduate school.

Preparing for Your Advising Appointment

Before meeting with your advisor, review the HSS Advising Policy and your advising syllabus to know what is expected of you. For the meeting, print and bring with you the following items:

1. A tentative schedule of classes for Fall 2013
2. Your unofficial transcript from PAWS
3. Your academic requirements as listed on PAWS

Remember that you must meet the following minimum grade requirement in the foundation courses before you may register for department core courses. You may register for core courses if you are currently enrolled in foundation courses, but be advised that your grades will be reviewed before the fall semester and if you do not meet the grade minimums, you will be de-registered from SOC301 or SOC302.

Four Special Topics Courses!

Consider our "special topics" courses (SOC370 and ANT170) which give students and faculty the chance to focus on a topic that is not currently on the regular curriculum. Please note that you may register for more than one topics class and if you have already taken SOC370 with a different topic, you may again register for SOC370. For Fall 2013, there will be four different topics offered. The first two of these courses count towards the specialization in Non-Profit and Community Development.

The first is "Community Based Research and Evaluation" taught by Dr. Diane Bates (SOC370-01). Students will learn how community based research and evaluation research are similar to, and different from, other types of research strategies used in sociology. Students will then apply this knowledge to real-world situations, working directly with community partners to research and/or evaluate topics such as youth mentorship, after-school programs, neighborhood resources, prisoner reentry, or community health. There are no prerequisites to this course, although students must be prepared to engage professionally and flexibly with community partners.

The second, "Social Movements" taught by Dr. Elizabeth Borland (SOC370-02) will examine the ways that people work collectively for social change. Dr. Borland is particularly excited to teach this course since most of her research is on social movements, and because students will read and critique a new text being written by a well-known scholar of activism who will visit TCNJ to get our constructive feedback, and to talk about his research on collective action. Prerequisites: SOC 101 or ANT 110.

The third special topics course "Max Weber and the Disenchantment of the World" brings alive the theory of Max Weber and is taught by Dr. Robert Anderson (SOC370-03). Dr. Anderson taught a special topics course on C. Wright Mills and the Sociological Imagination a few years ago to great reviews and is back by popular demand. Weber concentrated on the nature and meaning of the modern world, a world he saw as not just different in degree from traditional societies, but different in kind. In particular, he focused on social action and on the increasing importance of rationality as a 'driver' of such action. In this course, students will read some of Weber's writings on the nature of science, politics, class and status, bureaucracy, and religion. You will look at his contributions to the method of sociology, to its basic principles, and to some of his special applications. You will also examine his continuing legacy and consider why his work demands a new and 'fresh' reading. The course stands alone and requires no prerequisites beyond an open and inquiring mind.

Finally, we are excited to offer a subject that has not been taught by our department for many years: Archaeology! Dr. Lisa Lauria, an expert on Susquehannock Indian ceramics, will introduce students to this field in ANT170: Introduction to Archaeology. Students will explore the collection in our anthropology lab (SB319) and will learn about past human relationships, behaviors, and beliefs by looking at the stuff people left behind. There are no prerequisites for this course.
